Performance and Portfolio Update

- The Fund outperformed the S&P 500 Index¹ in the second quarter. Strong stock selection within Consumer Staples, Consumer Discretionary and REIT² sectors were positive contributors to performance.
- Large-cap stocks had a very good quarter, with the S&P 500 Index outperforming the Russell Midcap Index³ by 0.39% and the Russell 2000 Index⁴ (representing small-cap equities) by 0.63%.
- Within Consumer Staples, Whole Foods was one of our largest contributors due to Amazon's all-cash offer to buy the company at a significant premium. Among Consumer Discretionary holdings, Amazon contributed positively to performance as they continue to take market share from "bricks and mortar" retailers.
- An overweight to Energy and poor stock selection within the sector were the largest negative contributors to performance.
- In our view, U.S. equities continue to look expensive as the forward price-to-earnings ratio on the S&P 500 Index is well above its 25-year average. We remain underweight the Consumer Discretionary sector, especially traditional "bricks and mortar" retailers as their business models continue to be challenged by online retailers. We continue to overweight the Financial sector as we anticipate higher rates will be a benefit to their profits.

- ¹ The S&P 500 Stock Index is an unmanaged index of large capitalization common stocks. One cannot invest directly in any index.
- ² REIT stands for Real Estate Investment Trust. A REIT is a type of security that invests in real estate through property or mortgages and often trades on major exchanges like a stock.
- ³ The Russell Midcap Index measures performance of the mid-capitalization sector of the US equity market. The index is a float-adjusted, capitalization-weighted index of the 800 smallest issuers in the Russell 1000 Index. The index is a subset of the Russell 1000 Index and serves as the underlying index for the Russell Midcap Growth and Value Index series. The Index is reconstituted annually. One cannot invest directly in any index.
- ⁴ The Russell 2000 Index measures the performance of the small-cap segment of the U.S. equity universe. The Russell 2000 Index is a subset of the Russell 3000 Index representing approximately 10% of the total market capitalization of that index. It includes approximately 2000 of the smallest securities based on a combination of their market cap and current index membership. One cannot invest directly in any index.
- ⁵ Weighted Average is an average in which each quantity to be averaged is assigned a weight. These weightings determine the relative importance of each quantity on the average.
- ⁶ Forward Price-Earnings Ratio or P/E FY1 ratio is a ratio for valuing a company that measures its current share price relative to its per-share earnings over the next 12 months.
- ⁷ Return on Equity: The amount of net income returned as a percentage of shareholders equity. Return on equity measures a corporation's profitability by revealing how much profit a company generates with the money shareholders have invested.
- ⁸ An Ex-ante Beta is used for Funds with less than 2 years of performance history under its new mandate. The Ex-Ante Beta is calculated using a multi-factor risk model. Beta explains common variations in stock returns due to different stock sensitivities to the market relative to its underlying benchmark for the current period, not historical. A beta for a benchmark is 1.00: a beta greater than 1.00 indicates above average volatility and risk.
- ⁹ Figures include reinvested dividends, capital gains distributions, and changes in principal value.
- ¹⁰ Lipper Large-Cap Core Funds Index tracks the results of the 30 largest mutual funds in the Lipper Large-Cap Core Funds Index Average. The Lipper Large-Cap Core Funds Index Funds Average is a total return performance average of mutual funds tracked by Lipper, Inc. that invest at least 75% of their equity assets in companies with market capitalizations (on a three-year weighted basis) above Lipper's USDE large-cap floor. Large-cap core funds have more latitude in the companies in which they invest. These funds typically have an average characteristics compared to the S&P 500 Index.
